A storming performance in the punters eyes by David Cameron has seen Paddy Power cut the Conservatives to win next week's Election and to secure a majority.

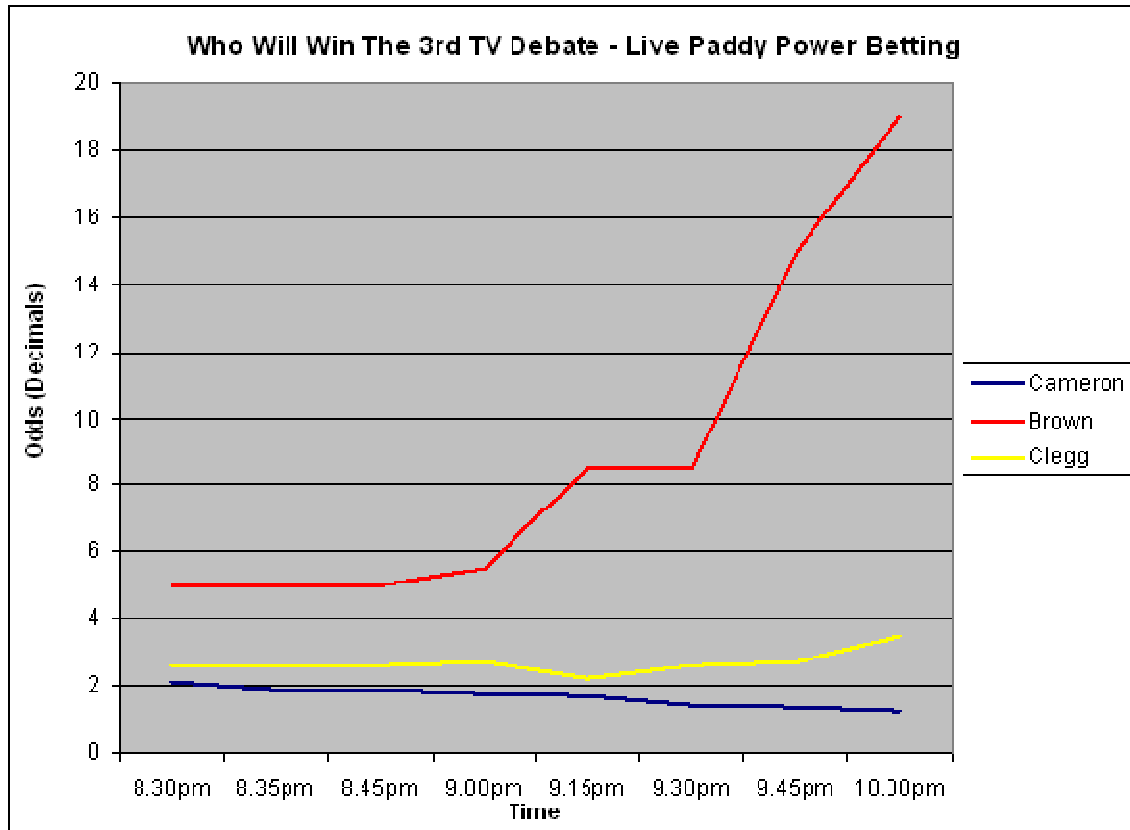

A Tory majority came in from 11/8 to just 5/4 as Cameron appeared to put in a strong showing in the economy themed debate. Labour remain unchanged at 5/1 with the Lib Dems drifting to 16/1 from 14s.

However a hung parliament remains an ever increasing likelihood at 4/7.

Darren Haines, spokesman for Paddy Power, said: "If Clegg was a clear winner in the first two debates then punters were in little doubt Cameron had won the third and they were quick to speculate that it could have a crucial impact on the Conservative's Election chances."

In Paddy Power's Debate Betting Tracker David Cameron was the punters favourite to win – finishing at the shortest odds to be declared the winner of a debate of any of the three leaders in any of the three debates (2/7).

Gordon Brown barely laid a glove on his rivals with punters unmoved to back the PM at anytime during the show finishing a whopping 18/1 outsider. Paddy Power will declare their debate winner according to the ICM poll.
